

- 1) I don't really feel that there are many things I want to learn better now that we are in the end phase of this project, but if I had to give an answer, I would say something relating to server communication.
- 2) By continuing to participate in discussions with my peers and helping in areas that I am good at.
- 3) I have helped create user stories and dividing them into tasks.
- 4) Due to the bachelor's thesis being handed in this week, I haven't done as much code this week as previous weeks as planned and agreed upon beforehand by all of the members of the group. My focus for this week has therefore to a greater extent been more related to dividing user stories and writing the team reflection.