

Individual Reflection

Week 8

Malin Rosén

This was the last sprint, and we finished all our user stories and made sure that the product was polished and working as we wanted. Since this was my first true experience with scrum, I feel like there is a lot to improve on in the future. I want to get better at writing good user stories and estimating them, which I felt was subpar during this project. I also want roles to matter more in the future, since it felt a bit scattered.

I helped my team finish up the project, though I don't really think that we learned anything new this week since it was mostly finishing touches. I was active in finishing up the final user stories and made sure that all tasks that were assigned to me got done and moved them to the appropriate column.

We also prepared the final presentation this week, as well as the team reflection. I helped with both, and I think that we did a good job!
