This week we started writing code for our project. We have mainly been working in HTML and CSS but have also started looking into what JavaScript we might need for the project. Since the project is in the previously mentioned languages, I want to keep improving my skills in those languages. I have not really touched HTML, CSS, or JavaScript for a couple of years, so my skills are a bit rusty.

Looking forward, I can teach other team member who do not have any previous experience basic HTML, CSS, and JavaScript to get them started.

Regarding the team's usage of scrum, I have assisted the group with getting all the user stories in the correct category. I have also done a lot of coding this sprint, working on the booking page with two other team members.

I helped with the team reflection which was this week's deliverable.